I'm not disconnecting but it looks like I am.

2019/10/20

I use wireless adapter because I'm separated from the router by a wall. In league of legends if you disconnect from the internet you'll get 500ms, we'll need that later. Now the problem I'm experiencing only happens to my computer only so it might be about the adapter (TL-WN781ND) or Windows 10(?). When I watch youtube or browse the internet in general, my internet is fine and I experience no problems but when it comes to online games, the internet falls down hard. Sometimes the internet's fine with a fixed 25ms, even checked my internet speed before every game but when I'm extremely unlucky, my ping will suddenly blow up to at least 1000ms, even being fixed on 500ms entirely (meaning it might be disconnected). My wifi bar would either go 1 bar, no bar or full bar as if like I'm near it (which I only get around 2-3). It continues until I finish the game, I even played right before posting this and my connection is alright. What I tried to fix this was to update drivers, a .bat file that changes ip address but when disconnecting and reconnecting to my wifi is something special, on occasions I get a new NetworkProfile named NetworkProfile with identical bar and password as my original wifi I can delete it but it always comes back. TL;DR I keep on getting lag spikes during online games only but reverts back to normal after one, and sometimes adds an unfamiliar wifi named NetworkProfile every time I disconnect and connect again.
